Think About Thinking

Directions – With your assigned partner, alternate asking each other the following questions. One person asks the first questions, listens for answer and then the person who just answered asks the same question of their partner. And so forth. Be prepared to share your partner's answers with the class.

1. What happened to you one year ago that you can remember right now?
2. What is your earliest memory?
3. What is one memory that you cannot forget?
4. Have you ever wondered why you remember?
5. Which do you prefer, wondering or remembering?
6. What have you wondered about today?
7. Have you ever wondered why you wonder?
8. Right now, what are you thinking?
9. Do you have a favorite thought?
10. Are your thoughts in color, or in black and white?
11. Can you take a thought apart the way you can take a clock or a sentence apart?
12. When you're unhappy, are your thoughts also unhappy?
13. Do you ever think about your own thinking?
14. Right this minute, can you completely stop thinking?
15. Do you think when you're asleep, or only when you're awake?
16. When is it easier to think, when you're taking a test or listening to music?
17. Do you sometimes think of more than one thing at the same time?
18. Do you sometimes have strings of connected thoughts that move through your mind like connected railroad cars?
19. Is there a difference between having thoughts and thinking?
20. Which do you prefer, to read about reading, to write about writing, to talk about talking, or to think about thinking?
